"Colorectal cancer is the 3rd most diagnosed cancer in the US for men and women combined, and it's becoming increasingly common in young adults. Fortunately, colonoscopy can be performed for early detection and to prevent the disease, so it is saving thousands of lives each year. As colorectal cancer typically doesn't show symptoms in the early stages, it's important to talk with a doctor about your risk factors, such as age, ethnicity, and family's screening history." - Dr. David Barry

NEW GUIDELINES!

With colorectal cancer on the rise in younger people, the recommended age for colonoscopy screening for the average person has been lowered to 45.
